MANDERSON, South Dakota (Achieve3000, March 31, 2020). Manderson, South Dakota, is home to the Oglala Lakota people. It's also a great place for teens to practice their ollies. Or work on their nollies. Sometimes the pros come to town. Then fans might get to see something truly daring. It's called the impossible.

These are all skateboarding tricks. And they're happening on Native American reservations across the U.S. Yes, skateboarding is popular among Native American youth, but it's more than just a sport.

Take Manderson and nearby Pine Ridge. They're part of the Pine Ridge Reservation. Hundreds of skaters come to their skateparks. They practice tricks and meet friends. But the skateparks in Manderson and Pine Ridge aren't just skater hangouts. They were built by the Stronghold Society. Stronghold helps young people on the reservation build confidence. It aims to give them a healthy outlook on life.

Then there's San Carlos Apache Reservation in Arizona. That's another place where kids know a nollie from an ollie or a wallie. This rez is home to a busy skatepark. It's also where Douglas Miles lives. He's a famous San Carlos Apache-Akimel O'odham artist. He is well known for his painted
